

Gender-Based Environmental Shame: A Problem for Everyone

Wednesday, March 13, 2019

4:00 p.m.

Frick Center, Founders Lounge

Contact Information

Office of Marketing and Communications marketing@elmhurst.edu

The Genevieve Staudt Intercultural Lecture

Sarah Fredericks studies how guilt and shame affect the way we think and behave in response to environmental sustainability issues. An assistant professor of environmental ethics at the University of Chicago, her research focuses on sustainability, sustainable energy, environmental guilt and shame, and environmental justice; and her work draws on pragmatic and comparative religious ethics.